

Abstract
“Impacts on the Academy”
David E. Shulenburg

Assessing the impact of proposed changes in the scholarly communications modes and methods is to deal in the subjunctive. In this session David Shulenburg will consider how the worlds of teaching, research and service to external communities might differ if most scholarly communications were available at some point on the web for free. These considerations will include the impact such a development might have on the way the academy is viewed by the public and our funders.
